The process in working is as follows: Suppose the motor to be at the period of explosion and the piston thrust forward; the gas expands during the first part of the stroke till the piston arrives at a certain point in its travel, when the pressure of the gas inside the cylinder falls below atmospheric pressure. From that moment a fresh supply of gas is drawn through the valve S till the piston is at the end of its stroke. On the return stroke the gas is compressed and raises the exhaust valves S , which allow a certain amount of burnt gas to escape. The fresh gas had not arrived so far as S . Compression will continue when the piston has passed the exhaust valves, but the gas remaining in the cylinder can no longer escape, and the degree of compression at the end of the stroke will be sufficient to cause the explosion of the fresh gas-Arrangement of Loyal Motor. in the upper part of the cylinder. The cycle is then repeated in the above order. We said that all the burnt gas was not expelled; this is perhaps one of the causes which prevents the motor from heating, although nothing...
